

Tips and Tricks in the pages of . . .

Finding Your Chicago Ancestors

A Beginner's Guide to Family History in the City and Cook County

- Not-to-be-missed sources for urban genealogy. (p. 13)
- Backward is good, forward is bad. (pp. 14–15)
- The big fat books packed with birth dates that nobody knows about. (p. 25)
- How to get your hands on unreleased U.S. censuses. (p. 23)
- What happened in 1922 that changed the search for female ancestors. (p. 30)
- Want to bag another ancestor? A posse is better than Marshal Dillon. (p. 34)
- The two places in the Chicago area with self-serve birth certificates. (p. 36)
- Go Hoosier if you can't find your ancestor's marriage in Cook County. (pp. 52–53)
- Read this before you say, "My ancestor didn't have an obituary." (pp. 202–203)
- The three towns that were mini-Renos for divorce filings. (p. 63)
- So you've got your ancestor's divorce decree – what mistake are you making? (pp. 60, 63)
- Try playing "online bingo" to find an elusive married name. (pp. 79, 81)
- Did your ancestor live on Fake Street? (p. 92)
- Travel back in time to "the old neighborhood." (pp. 96–97)
- Sources for firefighter forebears. (p. 116)
- Unlocking hidden records of the old Chicago City Cemetery. (pp. 136–137)
- If your ancestor came from Hungary and spoke Slovak, was he Hungarian or Slovak? (p. 164)
- "Back-door" method for finding your ancestor in the census. (pp. 190–194)
- Digital ways of finding death notices without having death dates. (p. 208)
- The presidential library that lets you borrow its newspapers. (p. 211)
- Where is she? Two indexes to try if your ancestor isn't in county or state death indexes. (pp. 222–224)
- You can do it! How to load film in a microfilm reader. (p. 237)
- Great stuff for genealogists, open evenings and Sundays. (pp. 278–281)
- Research on the cheap: The website that tells you which libraries nationwide hold which books. (p. 297)

Read Grace DuMelle's step-by-step guide for more easy-to-understand advice on where and how to research your family history.

Now available in local bookstores, in online bookstores, and at www.lakeclaremont.com.