About the Authors

Ted Okuda is a Chicago-based film historian whose books include The Columbia Comedy Shorts, The Monogram Checklist, The Jerry Lewis Films (coauthored with James L. Neibaur), The Soundies Distributing Corporation of America (coauthored with Scott MacGillivray), Charlie Chaplin at Keystone and Essanay: Dawn of the Tramp (coauthored with David Maska), and Science Fiction America (as a contributing editor). Ted's articles, interviews, and reviews have appeared in numerous film and television publications.

Jack Mulqueen produced commercials, segments, and television programs during the golden age of children's television. In his 15-year television career Jack was at the helm of three Chicago Emmy-nominated kid shows: The Mulqueens and The Mulqueens' Kiddie-A-Go-Go (both starring his wife, Elaine), and the dance program The Swingin' Majority. After leaving kids' TV Jack launched several successful business ventures including the long-running Hollywood Collectibles Show. The Mulqueens live in the Chicago suburbs.
